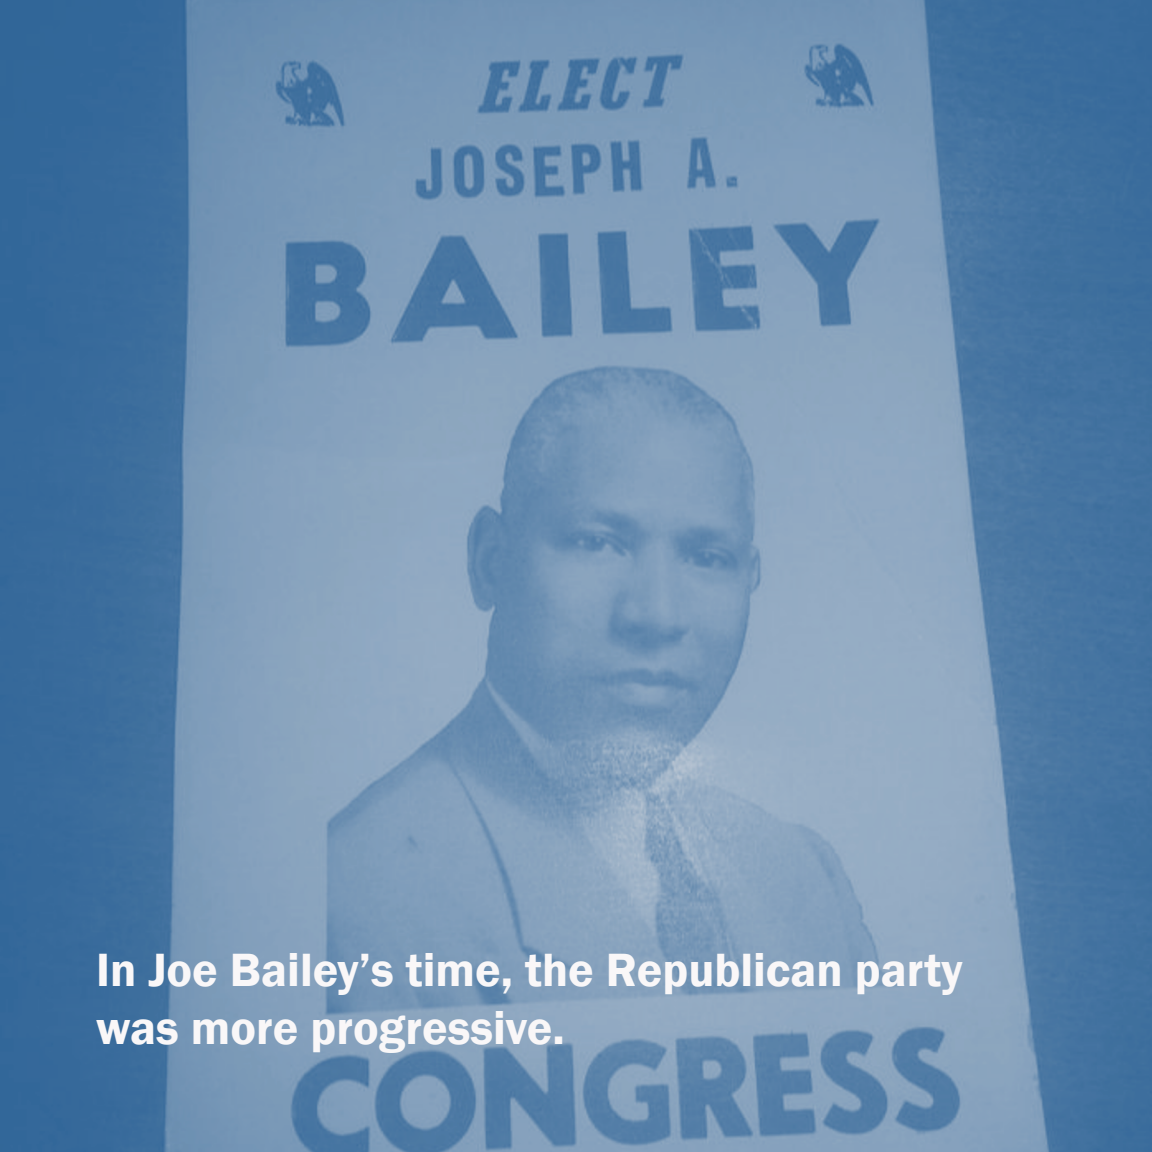
Republican admirers coined the phrase "I LIKE IKE" (Eisenhower's nickname).



In Joe Bailey's time, the Republican party was more progressive.

In 1956, the Republican platform promoted Federal help to low-income communities, the extension of Social Security, the extension of minimum-wage protections, the improvement of the unemployment system, the offering of asylum for refugees and displaced persons, the protection of the right of workers to organize into unions and to participate in collective bargaining, and the assurance of equal pay.

Today we equate those ideas with the Democratic Party of Bernie Sanders.
